Spécialiste en nutrition (partenariat et coordination), P4, Niamey, Niger (annonce de vacance générique)

L'UNICEF travaille dans certains des endroits les plus difficiles du monde pour toucher les enfants les plus défavorisés du monde. Pour sauver leurs vies. Pour défendre leurs droits. Pour les aider à réaliser leur potentiel.

Dans 190 pays et territoires, nous travaillons pour chaque enfant, partout dans le monde, chaque jour, afin de créer un monde meilleur pour tous.

Et nous n'abandonnons jamais.

Pour chaque enfant, passion.

Le Niger est un pays enclavé de 20,7 millions d'habitants, dont la plupart vivent en zones rurales (84%). La population est jeune et 52% des Nigériens ont moins de 15 ans. Près de la moitié de la population est pauvre (45,1%), malgré une réduction du taux de pauvreté au cours de la dernière décennie. Le pays, qui se classait 187/188 sur l'indice de développement humain 2016, voit son développement limité par plusieurs facteurs: les conditions climatiques qui entravent le développement rural, la vulnérabilité due à l'absence de diversification économique, la forte croissance démographique, les questions d'égalité de genre, l'alphabétisation et l'éducation, ainsi que la taille et l'enclavement du pays, qui entravent la fourniture de biens et services essentiels à la population.

De plus, le Niger est confronté à des crises récurrentes. Pendant de nombreuses années, le pays a connu une insécurité alimentaire chronique et a été confronté à des crises alimentaires et nutritionnelles en 2010 et 2012. Il est également régulièrement confronté à des épidémies, notamment au choléra, et à des inondations. De plus, l'instabilité dans la région a entraîné ces dernières années une insécurité et des déplacements de population, en particulier dans la partie orientale du pays.

Le Niger s'appuie fortement sur l'aide extérieure fournie par les partenaires techniques et financiers, telle que l'aide non remboursable, l'aide budgétaire et les prêts. À l'exception du secteur de l'éducation, les crédits budgétaires alloués aux secteurs sociaux restent bien en deçà des recommandations internationales ou des engagements nationaux.

Comment pouvez-vous faire une différence?
